Washington.—For the third time, in the NRA decision, the Supreme court has tried to diagram for congress a pattern by which it can accomplish the desired New Deal reforms. Until now there has been very little effort to meet the ideas of the high court. But from now on there must be.

Until now many New Dealers have been saying privately that the high court would change its tune. What they really have meant is that there would be a change in the court within a year, and the slender five to four conservative lead would be wiped out.

But in the NRA decision the court was unanimous. There has been a very apparent drift, even among the so-called liberals of the court, toward the "pattern" for progressive legislation on which the majority assisted in the decision throwing out the old code, but to which so little attention was paid. Also toward another diagram as to authority revealed in the decision on railroad pensions.

The court's very positive about the method in which decisions must be made by such bodies as the Interstate Commerce Commission, the NRA, the AAA, the federal trade commission, etc.

In each case, to put it in simple language, the body making a decision must conduct a fact finding investigation. It must receive the facts, rectify the powers granted it by law, and then announce its findings. This last word is very important. The Supreme court thinks a lot of it.

The main purpose behind all this is to force congress to be very specific indeed about powers granted, to set up limits, and to specify who shall make the fact finding investigations and pronounce the "findings."

Follows Court's Ideas

If all the other governmental bodies would study the decisions of the I. C. C., they would discover that the railroad regulating body has been strictly complying with the court's ideas for these many years. As a result, the number of times the I. C. C. has gotten its fingers burned by a reversing court decision has been so small as to be almost inconsequential.

There has been a lot of loose talk since the decision of the court, as to whether the effort would be to invalidate this or that, and to make rewriting this or that essential. Roughly, the court pattern would require the redrafting of most of the New Deal legislation, but that part of it is generally recognized. What is not so generally appreciated is that the New Deal agencies must reform their methods of procedure.

They must conduct fact finding investigations. Granted this is done, and the story of the investigation is told in the final decision, there is no disposition on the part of the high court to go behind the record as to the accuracy of these findings. So it is not a question of how the NRA, or the TVA, or the AAA as to whether it has the facts correctly.

But it must state them. It must state the power under which it acts, and must then present its findings.

To some observers this kind of purpose on the part of the Supreme court may seem rather capricious. But to the court it is enormously important. The court has made rather clear why it wants the decisions made in this way. In the first place, it gives anyone objecting to them a chance for lodging an effective protest, either by attacking the powers under which the action is taken, or by attacking the record of fact finding as revealed, or the conclusions reached from that fact finding.

In short, the Supreme court formula gives the constitutional right of appeal in reality, which under the methods pursued by the NRA and certain other New Deal agencies was and is not present.

Up to Soldier Lobby

What happens now on the soldier bonus depends, absolutely, on the soldier lobby. Col. John Thomas Taylor, his advisers and his superiors in the Legion organization, will determine, within fairly sharply defined limits, what will be done.

If they want to, they can put over something very close to the so-called Harrison compromise. At the time this compromise was first proposed, Senator Harrison stated that President Roosevelt would sign it.

Whether the President would sign it if passed now, following his veto's being sustained, is something else again. New elements enter into it. For example, if the Harrison plan had been accepted when proposed, the President might have been able to convince the conservative he wants to stay with him that otherwise he might have had not only the bonus but inflation forced on him.

He can no longer make that defense to opponents of the bonus. So it is entirely possible that the President might veto the Harrison bill, if passed now.

But—the Harrison bill could be passed over the veto with ease. There is no argument about the house. That body gave far above the two-thirds majority for the Patman bill. So the whole case rests in the senate.

Now the truth is that the apparent margin of eight votes, which the President had in sustaining his veto in the senate, was padded somewhat. It was not a firm margin. For example, close friends of both Senator Pope of Idaho, and Coolidge of Massachusetts report that each of these senators told the soldiers that if they could muster enough votes to override the veto with their votes, they would vote for the bonus. Otherwise not. Both, as a matter of fact, voted for the Patman bill on its first passage.

Kicks From Home

Reports also are that Senator Chavez of New Mexico has had so much kicking from his state on his vote to sustain the veto that he would feel obliged to vote for such a measure as the Harrison compromise if it were put forward, veto or no veto.

It is not necessary to go on with names to substantiate the point. Obviously the Harrison bill would avoid two of the points of attack made by the President in his veto message. In effect, it provides for payment only of present value of the bonus certificates, thus meeting the President's point that $750 invested now in a government bond would produce $1,000 in 1945 when the bonus certificates are due.

Also the Harrison compromise has no printing press money provision. These two important differences would be enough to change senatorial approval from the 54 to 46 vote sustaining roll-call to more than two-thirds favoring the bill.

Privately, everybody on Capitol Hill knows this. The only question is whether the Legionnaires want to push their advantage now, or whether they think it would be better strategy to wait until the eve of election next year.

If waiting, they could probably get a little more cash for the soldiers. By taking a little less now they would be sure. Naturally the representatives of the Legion are not loath to have something to keep on battling for. It justifies their existence. Not to mention their salaries.

True, it is generally believed that as soon as the bonus has been finally disposed of the Legionnaires will start working on pension legislation. But they do not like to talk about that.

G. O. P. Not Jubilant

Old heads among the Republican leaders—there are a few despite the fact that for one reason or another they do not seem to loom as possible candidates—are not as jubilant about the terrible jolting the administration has been getting from the Supreme court as most published interviews would have one believe.

There are two reasons for their pessimism—so far as G. O. P. advantage from the situation is concerned. One is that they know perfectly well Franklin D. Roosevelt is a very resourceful person. They know that within a short time he will evolve some sort of substitute program. They know that the big propaganda machine of the administration will do a swell job in telling the people about its possibilities. And they are not sure that it will be demonstrated to be a flop in time to head off Roosevelt's re-election.

They are perfectly sure in their own minds that no program can be drafted to accomplish the New Deal aims—particularly as to planned economy, government control of production, etc.—which will not involve a drastic revising of the Constitution. But they are not sure the people will be convinced of this before election.

Their minds go back to the first days of NRA, to all the enthusiasm about shorter hours, raising minimum pay scales, eliminating child labor, benefiting manufacturers and other employers by checkmating the chiseler, permitting co-operation, and temporarily forgetting about the anti-trust laws.

Few, indeed, were the Republican leaders in those days who dared attack the whole scheme, either as unconstitutional or undesirable. Even those who privately disapproved the whole thing knew that it would not only be foolish politically, but, coming from Republican lips, might even be regarded as rather patriotic partisanship. For it could certainly be attacked as tending to prevent what then seemed to many as the only proposal to get the country out of the depression from having a chance to succeed.

Few, indeed, were the Republican leaders in those days who dared attack the whole scheme, either as unconstitutional or undesirable. For it could certainly be attacked as tending to prevent what then seemed to many as the only proposal to get the country out of the depression from having a chance to succeed.

So what the skeptics among Republican leaders are worried about today is that something approaching that situation may be attained when the administration starts on its new tack.

The other angle for their pessimism is they fear a big reaction from the present wave of satisfaction over the court verdicts. They fear that the strikes now threatening, and various other conditions that may arise, may turn public sentiment all around within the next six months or more.

Involved in this is a rather interesting psychological factor. If the Supreme court decision had been 5 to 4, it is reasonable to assume that the New Dealers would be almost hysterical at the moment in denouncing the "reactionary majority" of the court. They would have kicked up so much fuss that the people in sympathy with the majority opinion would be irritated. This would keep them in a partisan mental condition, so far as the New Deal program is concerned. In short, a splendid mental condition for a good hot political campaign.

But the New Dealers are stunned at the blow. All thought of a change in the court is abandoned. Which is not calculated to keep critics of the New Deal steamed up. They are not only likely to cool off, but to have misgivings.

NEED FOR SCIENCE

By DR. KARL T. COMPTON
President Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

IT SEEMS to me that what is needed is a bilateral program for putting science to work for the national welfare. There is needed on the one side the co-operation of the scientists of the country generally, to assist the government in putting the work of its scientific bureaus on a scale of maximum efficiency and value.

There is needed on the other hand, a new type of government leadership whereby the scientific men of the country may be brought together to make an intelligent and co-ordinated attack on the great problems which are facing the country at those points where science may offer hope of alleviation or solution.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE

By CHARLES R. GAY
Member New York Stock Exchange.

THERE is a widespread misunderstanding of the Exchange; what it really is. It does not buy or sell securities. It does not dictate prices. It is simply a market—a meeting place where members gather to transact business in securities. It is not a private club. It is a national institution filling a national need of first importance. To it come the orders of those who wish to turn cash into earning power or securities into cash, and the prices registered on our tickers are a composite of the hopes and fears and necessities of the world's security holders. It is a great liquid market responsive to the needs of a great nation. It exists because it fills a vital need and because it is equipped to render service.

LIVING COSTS

By PROF. P. G. KAMMURER
Noted Economist.

IF THE value of gold remains where it was in February, 1933, and approximately where it is today in the free gold markets of the world, the cost of living will have to rise by about 50 per cent above what it is today before the "stake" represented by the reduction in the gold content of our dollar has been completely taken up.

If, however, as appears more likely, the value of gold depreciates to its 1920 level after the present crisis—stimulated and world-wide scramble for gold has subsided, then, when once the "shock" has been completely taken up, the cost of living will be about 116 per cent higher than it is now.

LESS DOGMA

By SIR WILFRED GRENFELL
Laborer, Physicist.

WE ARE still a very young world and I believe that we are getting better. I think that religion is stronger than ever, even though church attendance may not indicate it. There is less today of both dogma and "intellectual" religion. But there is more religion of the kind that comes from the heart, instead of the head. Now in science, for example, no doctor fifty years ago when science was materialistic dared to speak of spiritual things. Now, if you want to hear the gospel spoken, go to the Royal Academy of Science.

A NEW LOCARNO

By DR. HENRY GRUBER
Polish Economist.

IT IS just because of the failure of the political Locarno that the nations feel they should come to an economic Locarno as soon as possible. If stabilization could be arranged today it would be the beginning of recovery.

The question of tariffs would have to be included in the agenda. Today each country is in a box, surrounded by tariff walls—an absurd situation. If one can only find a way to open that box the nations will be able to breathe more easily and the circulation of world trade would start again.

FLOATING FORTRESSES

By SIR BOLTON EYRES-MONSELL
British Naval Expert.

FEW people realize the great defensive power that even our old battleships have today against air attack. The battleship of the future will be a veritable fortress of defense. I am confident that battleships, though not necessarily big ones, will remain the pivots whereon all our ships will perform their historic function of keeping open empire communications and making a tremendous contribution toward the general tranquility of the world by making our quarter of the globe safe.

WAR PROFITS

By WELFORD I. KING
Professor of Economics, New York University.

THERE is something grisly and repellent in the thought that men sitting safely in swivel chairs should reap fortunes from a war in which millions of as good or better men, who are suffering the loss of life or limb, or are suffering from disease and wounds, are yet selling their services for but a few paltry dollars a month.

MONKEYS SOLVE MYSTERY

Two monkeys solved a murder mystery in Bengal, India. They belonged to a gypsy who had them perform at fairs. On the way home the master was murdered while the monkeys looked on from a tree bough. Marking the spot with a piece of bamboo the animals hurried to their mistress. Their arrival without their master prompted her to call the police, who followed the monkeys to the spot and exhumed the body. By gestures, postures and facial expressions the animals recreated the murder by two men with knives. Following the monkeys to a nearby village the police arrested two men. The pets attacked the suspects at sight, heating and biting them savagely.

KELLY PETILLO ON MAY 30, WON the 500-Mile Indianapolis Race on Firestone Tires, breaking the track record and driving the entire distance at a rate of 106.24 miles per hour.

This record is an outstanding demonstration of tire efficiency. To go 500 miles in less than five hours on this rough and bumpy 26-year-old brick track, without tire trouble of any kind, demonstrates the strength and blowout protection that Firestone builds into their Gum-Dipped Tires.

AB JENKINS ALSO RECENTLY demonstrated the stamina, efficiency, and blowout protection built into Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires. He drove his 5000 pound car over the hot salt beds at Lake Bonneville, Utah, 3000 miles in 23½ hours. This was an average speed of 127.2 miles per hour, and although temperatures were as high as 120°, he had no blowouts or tire trouble of any kind.

These records are made possible by special construction features built into Firestone Tires.

Take no chances—protect your life and the lives of others by letting us equip your car with Firestone Tires and give you the Safety and Blowout Protection that race drivers demand.

Before you buy new tires ask yourself these three questions

- 1—"Will the tread give me the greatest traction and protection against skidding?"
- 2—"Are they built to give me the greatest blowout protection?"
- 3—"Without sacrificing these two important safety features will they give me longer mileage, thus making them the most economical tires I can buy?"

ANSWER No. 1—Leading university tests show Firestone High Speed Tires stop your car 15% quicker than the best of all popular makes of tires.

ANSWER No. 2—Unequaled performance records for sixteen consecutive years prove that Gum-Dipping gives you the greatest blowout protection ever known.

ANSWER No. 3—Thousands of car owners report unequalled mileage records—evidence of the longer wear and greater economy of Firestone High Speed Tires.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

NANNY IS SURE DANNY IS DEAD

THE silvery light of sweet Mistress Moon flooded the Green Meadows and chased the Black Shadows clear back to the very edges of the Green Meadows. It was just such a night as a Meadow Mouse loves, and Nanny Meadow Mouse would have enjoyed it and rejoiced in it and been thoroughly happy but for one thing. The truth is, Nanny Meadow Mouse had spotted that beautiful night for Nanny Meadow Mouse. He didn't know he had, but he had. You see, Nanny was worried and her worry was all on account of Danny.

The newest babies were quite safe in their snug nest, hidden—well, I won't tell you just where it was hidden. That was Nanny's and Nanny's secret, so I guess I haven't any right to tell you just where that snug little nest was. If I did they might not trust me again.

Anyway, those newest babies were quite safe, because they were too young to crawl out even if they should wake, which they were not likely to do because their little stomachs were full.

He Certainly Must Be Dead; Nanny Was Sure of It.

Little Meadow Mice are like other babies in that when their stomachs are full they sleep and grow. So Nanny didn't worry about the babies.

The half-grown children had romped and played in the moonlight until they had become so tired that they were glad to curl up in their beds. They were dreaming of the pleasantest of Meadow Mouse dreams. So Nanny didn't worry about them. But she did worry about Danny Meadow Mouse. Why didn't he come home? Never since she had known him had Danny been gone so long. "Something must have happened to him. She was sure of it."

Had Teddy or Granny Fox caught him? She hadn't seen either of them on the Green Meadows that day, but one of them might have been there long enough to catch Danny without being seen by her. Or perhaps Black Pussy the Cat from Farmer Brown's had surprised Danny. She had seen Redtail the Hawk sailing over the Green Meadows twice during the day and it might be that he had dined on Danny. It was a dreadful thought. She couldn't get rid of it. If something

The waves are tipped with shredded silver foam.

I gaze upon the sea and think of you. It may be beautiful, but it isn't home.

The splendid city flings its buildings high.

The stars are all afloat in heaven's dome.

The lighted windows and the starry sky.

It's all so beautiful, but it isn't home!

A little house upon familiar loam.

A maple tree, a fence where roses lean.

QUESTION BOX

by ED WYNN, The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I have just taken a job as a waiter in a downtown restaurant. I don't get a big salary; so depend a lot on my tips. Today a man had his meal, and when I gave him his check he said he could not give me a tip, as he only had enough money to pay the check. I'll never make any money that way. What shall I do the next time a man says that to me?

Yours truly,

I. SERVWELL.

Answer: The next time a man says he only has enough to pay for his check just take the check back and add it up again.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I have a girl friend who has a nasty habit of always saying nasty things about all the other girls. Everybody knows that about her, yet last night a boy friend who knows her said she was something to adore. What do you make out of that?

Sincerely,

C. KRITS.

Answer: When he said she was something to adore he probably meant that she was a knocker.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I went to a school dance the other night and danced with the same girl twice. She let me take her home, and as I left her I told her I thought she was the sweetest girl in the whole world and now she won't go out with me any more. I wonder why?

Truly yours,

WHATT STRONG.

Answer: She doesn't want to disappoint you.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I am a girl seven years old. My teacher in Sunday school asked me how many commandments there are. I said, "ten," then she said, "suppose I broke one?" and I couldn't answer her. Now she says I can't come back to Sunday school until I bring her an answer. Can you help me?

Truly yours,

MAY H. U. KNOR.

Answer: That's very simple, my little of the rind of each and a cupful of banana pulp. Peel and scrape bananas and put through a ricer or sieve. Beat the fruit mixture and stir to gether, chill and stir in three cupfuls of whipped cream, or the whites of three eggs. Freeze to a soft mush.

Braised New Cabbage.

Melt one-fourth of a cupful of sweet fat in a saucepan, add two green apples and two onions finely chopped; cook gently for three minutes, then add one shredded cabbage, three cloves, one-half cupful of vinegar, salt and pepper to season. Cover tightly and simmer until the cabbage is tender.

Tuna Fish Salad.

Soak one-half envelope of gelatin in one-fourth cupful of cold water, add three-fourths of a cupful of hot salad dressing and stir until well dissolved. Add one-half cupful of finely diced celery, one minced green pepper, one can of tuna that has been lightly flaked, salt and paprika to taste. Turn after blending well into individual molds, set away to harden. Serve on lettuce with a spring of parsley or water cress on top. Serve with a spoonful of mayonnaise.

Summer Squash en Casserole.

Take two and one-half cupfuls of cooked summer squash, add three-fourths of a cupful of thick tomatoes, two tablespoonfuls of butter, one and one-half teaspoonfuls of salt, one tablespoonful of grated onion, one-half cupful of seasoned chopped meat, fish or nuts, mix well, cover with buttered crumbs and bake until well browned. Egg plant or carrots may be served in the same manner.

With Violet Dots

Extremely youthful in its simplicity of line and fabric, this sheer white cotton dress shows an interesting treatment of the violet dotted motif. The wide sash is a deeper tone of violet taffeta.

Crocheted Scarf Is Easy for Beginner

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK

There is nothing the needleworker can make that is more practical and useful than a scarf. There is a scarf that is to be crocheted in the large flat stitch and when a number 5 steel crochet hook and number 15 cotton is used the scarf will measure about 12x34 inches when finished. Even the beginner will find the flat stitch easy and interesting to work, especially in the popular "Rose" design shown here. This scarf matches the Rose chair set shown a few weeks ago.

This package, No. 507, contains sufficient cream color Mountain Craft crocheted cotton to complete this scarf, also instructions, black and white diagram for easy counting of meshes, and crochet hook.

Write our Crochet Department, enclosing 40 cents for complete package No. 507 or 10 cents for instructions and diagram sheet only.
